Two thousand years ago, kings called emperors ruled the city of Rome. At that time, Rome was one of the strongest cities in the world. The city’s government ruled many other countries. Some emperors were intelligent and kind. Other emperors were foolish and mean. One of the worst emperors in history was Nero.

In 54 CE, Nero’s mother murdered the old emperor, Nero’s stepfather. Later, Nero became worse than his mother. He murdered his stepbrother, his stepsister (who was his first wife), his second wife, and even his mother, Agrippina. First, he tried to leave Agrippina in the middle of the sea. She swam safely to the beach. Then, he told his servant to kill her with a club.

In 64 CE, a fire started in Rome. Many buildings burned down. Nero sang songs during the fire. Later, he built a giant castle for himself where the fire had been. Nero was greedy and did not care about the poor people who lost their homes. Many people said that Nero started the fire. Nero lied and said that Christians started the fire.

Finally, the people of Rome wanted a new emperor. The army came to Rome to murder Nero. Nero decided to kill himself. Before he died, he cried, “What a great artist the world is losing!”

Two thousand years ago, __________ ruled the city of __________. One of the __________ Roman rulers was Nero. He murdered many members of his own __________. He even put his own __________ to death. In 64 CE, a __________ burned a part of Rome. Nero built a __________ for himself and said that Christians had __________ the disaster. Finally, he killed himself. His last words were, “What a great artist the world is losing!”
Today was really memorable. Our tour group woke up at 7:00 a.m. At breakfast, Mom and Dad were exhausted. I was excited, though. We were going to visit the Colosseum. Two thousand years ago, gladiators fought each other to the death there. Can you imagine people murdering each other for entertainment?

The Colosseum was full of other tour groups when we got there. I thought it was much too hot and noisy. Our tour leader, Julia, carried a big purple umbrella, so we could find her in the crowd.

Near the entrance to the Colosseum, there was a man selling gelato—that’s the Italian word for ice cream. I ran to buy myself a cone. When I turned around, I didn’t see Mom and Dad. Far away, though, I saw a purple umbrella. But, when I ran to the umbrella, I saw that a different tour leader was carrying it!

I felt like a scared little girl. Then, I remembered that I had a card with the hotel’s name on it. I used my money to get a taxi back to the hotel. The man who works in the front of the hotel called Julia for me. Julia told my parents where I was. They were really relieved! Mom cried when she saw me.
