o you love romantic stories? Maybe you will say "Yes, I love them." Or maybe you will say "Yuck, they're terrible!" Before you answer though, you should ask what that question means. It doesn't always mean love stories.

There was a time in western history called the "Romantic Period." Writers and philosophers of this time are called "Romantics." They had different beliefs than the people from previous times. The word "Romantic" comes from the word "Roman." This means "anything to do with the people of ancient Rome." The Romantics believed that ancient Rome was the greatest time for artists. Artists tried to make paintings and sculptures like the Romans. Musicians made lighter, more emotional music. Everyone believed that emotions were the most important thing in art.

Writers and philosophers believed that the Romans loved nature and the countryside. The Romantics looked at country people as having the best life. It was a natural life. They were closer to nature. Poets loved to write about the people. Philosophers also wrote about the people, but in a different way. They believed people had rights and privileges. They didn't believe that some people, like kings and queens, were better than others. This kind of thinking led to many changes in Europe. The French and American Revolutions, feminism and socialism all happened in part because of Romantic thinking. The next time someone asks you if you like Romantic stories, you'd better ask them what kind of story they mean.
