Questions 6 - 10

Herbert Schiller (1919-2000) was a communications scholar. He ____ (6) ____ that although innovations such as the Internet have been praised as democratic, both information and technology are in reality controlled by the rich. This is explained in terms of the core-versus-periphery argument. Core nations such as the United States have political power and economic advantages. ____ (7) ____ nations are poor, so-called Third World nations. According to this idea, information, and therefore influence, flows from the core to the periphery. Third World nations are thus unwilling consumers of core values, ____ (8) ____, and assumptions ____ (9) ____ in the information they receive. Those who believe in the theory of cultural ____ (10) ____ point to the US television shows and McDonald's restaurants found worldwide as evidence that influence only flows one way.
