Dear Dr. Flora

Sister in Trouble

Hi, my name is Kay. I'm writing to ask your advice. My parents recently divorced. I was sad about it, but I think my parents made the right decision. My younger sister, though, is taking the divorce badly. Before the divorce, my sister was very cheerful and gentle. Now, she's always annoyed and upset with me. I tried to talk to her about it, but our conversations end with us shouting at each other. She says she doesn't want me to bother her anymore. So I almost gave up. All of our talks end with me feeling like I do more harm than good, anyway.

But, lately, her bad attitude is causing trouble at school. The other day, I got a call from her principal. She got into a fight with a student at her academy. She hit a girl in the cafeteria! She was also got caught copying someone's homework. I think her behavior is getting serious, but I don't know how to help her. What I can do to reach her? Any tips, Dr. Flora?
